standing in Golden Hill street for 30 days doing nothing."

The mayor defended the director, saying that he did not believe he had a fair show, on the Golden Hill street and that it was not his fault that the railroad company had not brought its special work and had if on the ground. President Rogers replied that the fault was less with the 'railroad than in the failure of the director to look ahead. It had just been discovered, he said, that a man hole of the United Illuminating Company was in the way of the special work that the Connecticut will have to lay, and that Manager Paul of the Electric Company had informed him that this meant a week's delay, to make a change. Rogers thought this situation should have been seen in advance.

The commission finally voted to advertise for bids for labor to lay the South Main street pavement. Bids are to be received in which the use of the city's cement mixer is considered, and not considered. Director Biltz will also submit bids.

The contracts for furnishing materials have already been awarded to Silliman & Godfrey.

President Rogers inquired of the auditor as the ownership of the concrete mixer. The answer was that the city owns it. Mr. Rogers then asked if the director was authorized by the Council to buy it. The auditor said that no authorization had been obtained and none was required by the charter.

The auditor explained that some years ago the old board of public works bought a road roller. Complaint was made at this time and the opinion of the city attorney was sought. He found that a road roller was a tool and that the board of public works was authorized to purchase tools.

'Lobster Association'

In Merry Outing

Last evening a merry group of pirates swooped down upon Art Felix and while they did not "scuttle the ship" there was plenty doing. Ex-Alderman Ives entertained the party while anchored out in the middle of the Sound, Ben Buckelew brought plenty of rope to larrup the lobsters, also his resonant bass voice which was heard in several choice songs. It was noticed how popular some brands of noticed how popular some brands of ginger ale were. The ex-Alderman brought a blue ribbon mosquito from "Uncle Jeem's" park, and it kept Stickles and the towner busy. Brown's quartette with the graphophone did great work up in the bow. It's funny what a hit "My Wife's Gone to the Country" made with the married men. Behn and Levy spotted a shark coming forty miles an hour past the Stamford light, and took a rise on its back for a mile or so—they reported a pleasant frip. Every one on board found it very refreshing after the heat of the day to hold service with old "Uncle Neptune."

The party comprised the Messrs. Capt. Felix, Master of Ceremonies Ben Buckelew, Pilot Nordoby, ex-Alderman Fred Ives, E. C. Stickles, Howard Behn, George Brown, Harry Green, Harry Levy, Mrs. Fred Ives, Mrs. Bahnes, and the Misses Nairn, McKern Johnson, MacKingan, and Johnson, MacKinnan, Brady.

CONN. CO. WOULD PARE FAIRFIELD AVE. SIDEWALKS

More Room for Tracks to be Gained by Cutting Seven Inches Off Each Curb

GROOVED RAILS SEPT. 1

The Connecticut Company will petition the Common Council for permission to widen Fairfield avenue by narrowing the sidewalks on both sides of the street. It is proposed to take seven inches from each walk. The company desires to increase the distance between its tracks. Supt. Chapman announced the plan at a meeting of the peranent paving commission held last night.

The contempt in which the administration of the city is held was indicated when the company announced that the grooved rails, which were promised in three weeks, will not be on the ground before Sept. I.

These rails are the "concession" which the city gained by giving up

Mayor Lee, flushed and said, that the Mayor Lee, flushed and said, that the delay is unnecessary. He said that Vice President Townley does not want to lay grooved rails, and will not lay them if he has his way. The mayor them if he has his way. The mayor said that snow will be flying before the grooved rails come. He said "That statement I have made, that the "I rails will go down if the grooved rails do not come along had caused considerable comment." He asked the commission what they thought of it.

Commissioner Frank T. Staples said: "Let us hold out for grooved rails. They have beaten us before with delays. Let us stick this time." The rest of the commission agreed with the commissioner about sticking.

Commissioner Lashar, informed the mayor that there was another cause of delay in sight, as Engineer Elwell had informed the commission that his company intended to ask the common council next Monday night for permission to widen the roadway in Fair-

The mayor said that Fairfield avenue nor any other street, will be torn up until the work already started is fin-ished. "And I will be mayor until next November," he declared. There was a dispute between Supt. Chapman and the mayor as to whose fault it is that the delay occurred.

The mayor said it was because the company waited two weeks to have a certified copy of the action of the council mailed to it; an unheard of thing, as the legislature or no other legislative body, sends certified copies of its action to the parties in interest. Supt. Chapman said that the principal delay was the wait for the mayor to sign the report. He said that it was passed by the council on June 7 and that the mayor had not signed it until July 28.

It was July 9, Chapman said, when the mayor called upon Mr. Townley about the matter, and that the certified copy of the council's action was a long time in coming. The mayor declared that the city t was the mayor declared that the city thought it was doing business with dis of President Mellen, and that it was not mecessary to take up the matter with Vice President Townley. "I have a letter from Mr. Townley." I have a letter from Mr. Townley." Said the mayor, "in which he said that the grooved rails would be here in three weeks."

Engineer Elwell replied: "The mill was probably rolling girder rails at the time the letter was sent, but since then have begun to roll "T" rails. We will have to wait until they roll girder rails again." The mayor wanted to know if the rails could not be purchased in the open market, and Mr. Elwell said they couldn't. The mayor declared that he was at a loss to understand how the railroad did business as it had promsed to have the special work here for the corner of Golden Hill and Main streets ten days ago and it is not here yet. He said the railroad company was holding up the Golden Hill street

Engineer Elwell explained that he did not want it understood that the company was making application to company was making application to the permanent pavement commission for permission to make changes in Fairfield avenue, but wished to inform its members that it intended to ask the council to make some changes which he believed ought to be made in connection with the Main street per-mament pavement job. The company wants to widen Fairfield avenue and wants to widen Fairfield avenue and to take off several feet at the corner of Main and State street to make more room for its cars. If it could get consent to remove seven inches of the curb on both sides of Fairfield avenue from Main street to Water street it could put its tracks in on 10 foot centers and there would be three inches more room for tesms between the outside rails and the curb. This additional space appealed to the members of the commission who own automobiles. Mr. Elwell said that if it sesured the consent it would have to order new special work for the two corners.

Before Supt. Chapman left the room the Mayor said the only trouble with the superintendent was that he was the superintendent was that he was too economical.

Mr. Chapman said: "I wish the Mayor would say those things when some of my superiors are about."

He added that he thought the railroad company kept the center of the streets its lines passed through in as good condition as the city kept the outside of the streets. The Mayor said the condition the city kept the streets in did not excuse the company from keeping their part in good shape. Mr. Chapman said that the Mayor was mistaken as the State law on the matter did not require the railroad companies to furnish any better material or to keep its streets in any better condition than they were kept by the towns.
